Language Arts - Ms. O'Sullivan

Your child may have been talking about a writing practice we are working on in class wherein they tell about what career or job which may be interesting to them. This is a practice piece for a very small grade so that we have something to work out our revision stage of writing practice. It is only to be one or two paragraphs, not a full-blown essay. The next "big one" will be started in Trimester Three and not due until before Spring Break, so that is a ways off.

What does count in the last stretch of this current trimester is this Friday's 100 point Reading Plus average. Students may do extra at home to bring up their average but not in lieu of the one in class daily. Absent students are expected to make up a Reading Plus lesson just as they would any other missing work.

We're taking a break from TIME for Kids to read a biography in our Literature books about Matthew Henson. Students will have a quiz for it just as TFK and it will also be open-book.

Speaking of missing work, the deadline is this Friday, February 15th to turn in past missing work. Students may check IC (as can parents online or with the Infinite Campus app) to see if there are any M's to indicate that their assignment is missing.

DLI Week 17	Quiz Friday, February 15th
Reading Plus	Friday, February 15th Absolute Minimum number of lessons required: 8 to avoid docked points

Textbook online access:

Student should login to google and their gmail using their firstname.lastname@lewispalmer.org and their super secret password.

From their gmail window, click the "waffle" icon and scroll down to the pearson login icon, another window should open. Click the PearsonSuccess Net button on the right hand side, another window should open with the textbook for math.

REDO/CORRECTION POLICY:

As of January 2019, I have implemented a correction policy for any quiz or assignment. If a student scores a 69% (U) or lower on any assignment or quiz they may make corrections for credit. (a grade of 79-70% may also be corrected if you deem necessary) The corrections should be done on another piece of paper and stapled to the original assignment. Explaining their error is not necessary, HOWEVER they should work through the entire problem, show ALL their work and have the correct answer to receive credit.

Tests can always be corrected regardless of the grade earned. Test corrections are done on another piece of paper and should include the problem, their answer, the correct answer with all the work shown as well as an explanation of their error is part of their corrections.

Science/Social Studies - Mrs. Fish

*All agendas are subject to change depending on unforeseen events of delays, closures, reteaching, or anything that can affect the schedule. This is just a "guideline"

(SS = Social Studies)

(Sci = Science)

(HW = assignment given...this may or may not necessarily be "homework", but what was assigned in class. This is also what I feel could potentially become homework; although I ALWAYS try to give in-class time to work on their assignments to complete in class)
